

Standardization

Peter Sissons
Head of International Engagement
BSI

By Royal Charter

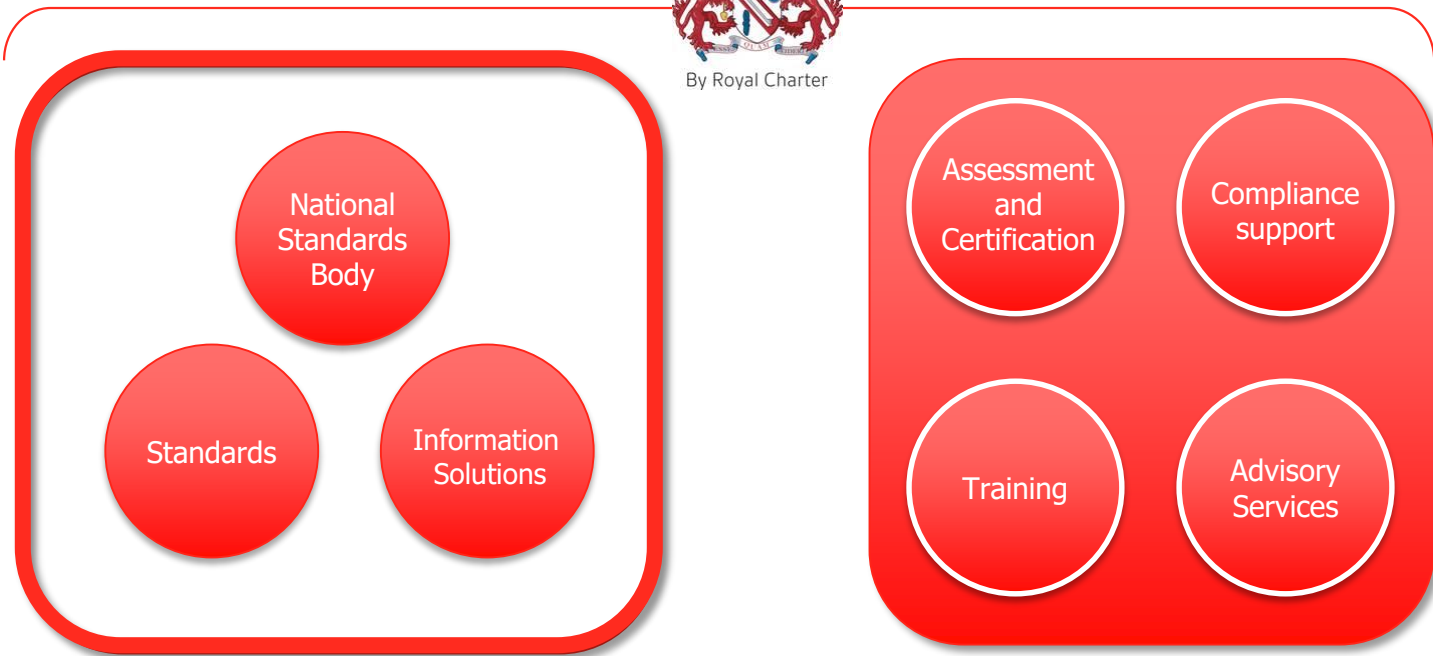

Copyright © 2017 BSI. All rights reserved.

BSI Group structure

By Royal Charter

BSI National Standards Body

1. BSI acts as the national standards body (NSB) for the UK, representing industry, government and public interests in all matters of national, European and international business and industry standards.
2. BSI maintains the infrastructure for experts from industry, government and societal stakeholders to participate in the shaping, development and maintaining of voluntary standards that meet WTO criteria of
 - Full stakeholder engagement
 - Open public consultation, and
 - Consensus.
3. BSI is independent of government, industry and societal interests and will provide expert advice to all parties on the role of standards in delivering performance improvement through better behaviours, business processes or products and services.
4. As the UK NSB we see standards as 'knowledge of what good looks like'. We are working to raise awareness and understanding of the role of standards in business and how consensus standards, codes and guidance can drive innovation, productivity and growth.

Standards and Regulation

Standards

- Standards are knowledge for business and industry, shared through consensus
- Standards are tools of the market for voluntary use, used most effectively through procurement
- Standards are not regulations, but can be used to support public policy

Standards supporting regulation

- Earned Recognition
- Co-regulation
- Self-regulation

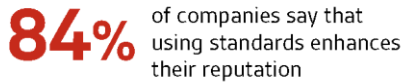

Standards are made by people for people, everywhere
Standards are a consensus of what good looks like

Priorities

- Engagement
- Innovation
- Standards development

Built Environment	Manufacturing	Healthcare
Energy	ICT	Security & Defence
Governance & Resilience	Performance	Sustainability

Economic benefits of standards of additional UK exports per year can be attributed to standards

Thank you

Peter Sissons

Head of International Engagement

BSI

Peter.Sissons@BSIGroup.com

By Royal Charter

Copyright © 2017 BSI. All rights reserved.